

Pesky Starlings Slain With Shotgun

For several weeks the trees in the Courthouse park have been the roosting place at night for countless numbers of starlings that chirp and chatter almost incessantly and in other ways are a decided nuisance. City authorities engaged Lawrence Krieg to start a war of extermination. Krieg, armed with a 12 gauge shotgun, visits the scene nightly and fires into the trees, with the result that many birds are killed. Krieg said last night he had killed 900 starlings in the last few days.
